Surprises? The nature of the program is such that my two co-counselors and I ran the show the whole summer. We were pretty much completely autonomous from the rest of camp. We planned the program, daily schedule, all activities, everything! We cooked, we cleaned, we drove, we were nurses and ministers of fun and disciplinarians. I grew a lot last summer having that kind of responsibility.

Expectations? I expected the summer to be awesome, which it was. I also expected to get incredibly close with my two co-counselors who I would be working almost exclusively with all summer. I was amazed by how well the three of us worked together and just naturally found our roles in the group. Working with two guys all summer was fantastic, but I did miss female companionship, and that is one thing last summer has really taught me to value.

The purpose of life is a life of purpose; a servant leader recognizes that truism and also recognizes that you gain the world when you lose yourself.
