This sculpture was created by the late Paul T. Granlund, sculptor-in-residence at Gustavus Adolphus College, and a unique meeting space.

The David and Delores Johnson Waterfall provides an attractive focal point for photos, conversation, or quiet reflection.

This formal garden includes rose bushes selected for the late Margaret Noonan, a former employee of the Arboretum.

This garden is home to a wide array of coniferous tree species and varieties.

This garden incorporates some Swedish design elements in a large formal garden.

This open-air cedar gazebo, constructed in 2018, affords Shelter.

This coniferous woodland is a mix of mostly red and white pine.

This area was designed using Feng Shui concepts to observe nature.

Each president of the College is honored in this grove with an oak tree.

This hub—which connects the Arboretum trails to the city sidewalk—and Biocenter is a great place to learn about prairie plants and honor the many donors who made the Coneflower Prairie possible.

This open-air cedar gazebo, constructed in 2018, affords Shelter.

The Chester and Marian Johnson overlook is a quiet place to sit on glacial boulders and observe the prairie.

The Ella Swenson garden is a quaint circular perennial garden space including shrubs and trees.

This garden includes rose bushes selected for the late Margaret Noonan, a former employee of the Arboretum.

This small understory ironwood garden provides a unique place to observe nature.

This coniferous woodland is a mix of mostly red and white pine.

This area was designed using feng shui concepts to observe nature.