

Student Reflection on Instruction (SRI)

Gustavus Adolphus College the Student Reflection on Instruction (SRI) is an instrument used to examine student experiences in a course. The Student Reflection on Instruction (SRI) allows a faculty member to view a course, to some degree, through the eyes and experience of the students in the class. For this reason, your thoughtful feedback on this survey is a crucial component for developing a complete picture of this course. Your instructor, in seeking to develop a full picture of your experience, may also choose to add additional questions to the SRI instrument; thus, you may see some questions specifically tailored to this particular course. Your participation, while very important, is optional, and your responses are entirely anonymous. The instructor will not be able to view the results until after the course is completed.

- Please remain silent until every student has finished the evaluation.
- You cannot submit the evaluation unless you have chosen an answer for each of the multiple choice questions. "Prefer not to answer" is also an option.
- Be assured that the instructor will not be allowed access to any of the evaluation results until final grades for the course have been submitted.
- The anonymity of each student is protected. Your responses are stored anonymously – without ANY information that would link the answers to the identity of the student.
