

Gustavus Adolphus College Alumni and Friends Favorite Treasures of Ancient Greece April 17-28, 2018

Explore ancient Greek history and culture and learn about the artistic and political history of “the Cradle of Civilization,” led by Gustavus Adolphus College Classics Professors Emeriti, Will and Patricia Friert. This 12-day custom-created study tour combines learning, exploring, leisure, lecture, food, and arts led by these faculty experts.

Our learning features a stroll through the ancient Agora of Athens. This downtown of the Greeks, where Socrates walked and talked, featured courts and markets and hero cults. Slipping into the shade of the small but rich Agora museum, we learn some basics of Athenian social, political, and artistic life from sculptures, vases, inscriptions, children’s toys, and even an ancient potty-chair. We visit the Parthenon on the Acropolis and the remarkable new Acropolis Museum, a model of twenty-first century museum design. Later we explore the Museum of Cycladic Art, housing the world’s best collection of the charming third-millennium sculptures that inspired Picasso. After a morning at the National Archeological Museum, we leave the ancient and modern capital city and travel to the sacred mountain shrine of Apollo at Delphi, where one senses why this was “the navel” of the world and a powerful source of Greek political intelligence.

Next, we visit the Greco-Roman trade center of Corinth, where St. Paul founded a Christian community, before we settle into Nafplion, a seaside haven popular with modern Athenians for its food, Mediterranean strolls, and good shopping. Nafplion is our base for outings to Mycenae, home of Agamemnon, the leader in the Trojan War, to Epidauros, the ancient healing shrine of Asclepius and site of the best preserved Greek theatre, as well as to a modern vineyard and an olive farm to taste the traditions passed down for centuries. A flight to Santorini takes us to a uniquely beautiful island and the archeological site of Akrotiri where excavations reveal late Bronze Age multi-story buildings in a city buried in the volcanic eruption often associated with Atlantis. We celebrate our adventures in a lovely farewell dinner before returning home from this stimulating and enriching exploration of ancient and modern Greece.

Greece Study Tour Leaders

It has been forty years since Patricia and Will Friert led their first study tour of Greece. The Frierts, now Emeritus Professors of Classics at Gustavus Adolphus College, have led several trips to Greece in addition to studying, living and vacationing there. This well-travelled couple also has extensive experience with Japan where they lived and taught for two years, on a faculty exchange and in the Fulbright program.

Patricia, who taught Greek art and archaeology at Gustavus, is the author of a Garland book on Greek Art and Archaeology and the recipient of grants for Latin education. She now works as a textile artist, dyeing fabric using the traditional Japanese shaped-resist techniques of shibori, exhibiting and teaching in venues throughout the country. For several years after retirement, she taught a First Term Seminar on bi-cultural identity, in which meditation played a prominent part.

Will published articles on the classical tradition and a book on Paul Granlund. He was awarded a national teaching award, Gustavus' Edgar Carlson award, and the college's Faculty Service Award. Since retirement he has continued to teach courses on mindfulness and on classical subjects, especially Greek mythology, Homer's Odyssey, and drama.
